FCCLA students train to take charge

POSTED: November 30, 2009

Students Taking Charge, the South Williamsport chapter of Family, Career and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA), along with nine other Pennsylvania school districts, was selected to receive a grant to develop a project that will increase nutrition awareness and physical activity among students in their district.

On Oct. 19, three FCCLA members attended a training in Seven Springs.

Alisha Holmes, Nicole Paternastro and Sierra DeAngelo were trained on different aspects of the program from brainstorming ideas and setting goals to analyzing data, developing a budget, and implementing their action plan.

They also were trained on record keeping and reporting procedures and requirements. The South Williamsport FCCLA chapter is planning and developing a variety of wellness activities, which will be implemented in the district throughout the school year.
